The leasehold factory, which could be relocated, is very well set up. So well, in fact, that it could be run under management. Particularly as the staff are all very skilled and experienced, since its establishment in 2006, all sales have been to distributors all over Australia. So there's no shop front.

You could diversify the product range and duplicate the promotional printing to other products. The equipment already exists and some machinery is only a few years old, as do the efficient systems. And the capacity is available.

Opportunity is knocking...

Hear that tap, tap, tapping?

That's the sound of opportunity knocking.

The current turnover, which exceeds $ 1 million, can grow much further. Not just by product diversification. A new stream of business direct to the consumer remains untapped. There's still no need for a shop front cost. Online retailing presents a highly profitable opportunity.

There's a huge unmet demand for further products within the sector.

An experienced business owner will recognize this opportunity.

And will hear it knocking.
